SHAPING FUTURES

One Child at a Time

Bradi Rex of Blue Rock is an active 8-year-old. Saturday she has a softball game, Wednesday she takes horseback riding lessons, and Thursday she attends Shaping Futures, a Genesis exercise and nutrition program.

“The reason we joined the program was because I heard on the news that 20 percent of children ages 5 to 11 are obese,” said Bradi’s mother, Cherie. “Bradi always came out a little high on the growth charts, and we wanted to come up with some ideas to help.”

The helpful ideas included age-appropriate exercises, meal planning tips and portion control information from Shaping Futures. “We know about portion size, but sometimes we need reminded,” said Cherie, a preschool teacher at Morgan Local Schools.

Bradi is reminded about portions by using a kid-friendly plate that pictures vegetables the size of a tennis ball. “Instead of filling the whole plate with fettuccini Alfredo, she learned to put a portion the size of a CD on her plate,” Cherie said.

Before starting the sessions, Bradi had a physical and met with a dietitian to identify risk factors and set reasonable health and behavior goals. The lifestyle/behavior change program is designed for children ages 5 to 11 who struggle with weight, and it concentrates on improving eating habits and exercise. “We don’t focus on losing weight, but instead concentrate on improving lifestyles and setting goals,” said Shelley Zimmerman, M.S., manager of risk intervention and disease management at Genesis.

Bradi Rex shows how much fun exercising can be – something she learned in Shaping Futures, a nutrition and fitness training program for families.

Bradi’s goals also include waiting 20 minutes before getting a second helping and increasing her exercise time. She enjoyed learning new exercises. “I learned you can work out while having fun,” she said. “I run to the music on that little digital thing.” The “little digital thing” is Rhythmathics, a smartphone application that tracks a child’s exercise programs and length. The exercise sessions, held at the Genesis Lifestyle & Fitness Center, include physical activities along with support from Genesis health professionals and other families in the program.

Bradi now pays more attention to the distance she walks the family’s Border collie to her grandmother’s house. Grandmother Judy, who lives a half-mile down the road, also attended Shaping Futures with Bradi. Judy is experienced making healthy choices because her husband, Jim, has been a diabetic since childhood. “Even though I have done it all these years, I still learned from the program,” Judy said. “The plate made Bradi more aware of portion size. Instead of us telling her what to eat, she knows the foods and portions to put on the plate.”

A Family Affair

Attending the sessions was a family affair. Grandpa Jim also went with Bradi as well as dad, Jason. “We got ideas of things we could do to help Bradi – anything we can do to stay ahead of it,” said Jason, a Morgan High School teacher.

With a family history of diabetes, they were looking for answers from their pediatrician. “We had discussed our concern about the growth chart with Dr. Tuck, (Richard Tuck, M.D., PrimeCare of Southeastern Ohio Pediatrics). We had been wondering what to do and he helped us find the answer,” Cherie said.

Genesis Program Makes a Difference

Childhood obesity is a U.S. epidemic. More than 9 million children, or one out of every seven, are overweight. Overweight children are more likely to develop health problems typically associated with adults such as cardiovascular disease.

The Shaping Futures program was developed by the Genesis Diabetes and Nutrition Education department to help create healthy habits. The one-hour sessions provide nutrition and exercise training for children and their parents. At the end of six weeks, follow-up visits with the child’s physician assess progress.

Shaping Futures is making a difference. Recently, an 8-year-old girl attending a community health fair accurately measured portions and food groups. When asked how she knew the right answer, the child replied that she was in a special program at the fitness center.

“That’s our goal,” Shelley Zimmerman, M.S., manager of risk intervention and disease management, said. “We want to teach children healthy habits and keep them out of the diabetes education program.”

The fall session of Shaping Futures starts Thursday, Oct. 6 at 7 p.m. For registration information, call (740) 454-4568.

IN GOOD HANDS

Top 100 Hospital Award Proves It

Ashley Caw was 8 months pregnant and looking forward to four more weeks preparing for the birth of her child. That is, until she visited her obstetrician with her feet and legs swelling, and her blood pressure high. She was admitted immediately to Genesis-Bethesda, where she and her unborn infant were watched closely.

The next day, it was apparent the baby was in some distress as his heart rate dropped, so Ashley's doctor decided to do an emergency C-section. Within a half hour, Ashley was whisked away to bring her baby into the world – a whole month early.

Avery Lee Devoll arrived at 10:03 a.m. on Friday, June 17, weighing 4 pounds and 10 ounces ... and perfectly healthy. He only needed to spend a couple of hours in the intermediate care nursery before being moved to the well-baby nursery.

It was a happy ending to a scary start for Ashley, husband Jeremy Devoll, and baby Avery. But Ashley and Jeremy, who are both employees at Genesis, knew they were in good hands with the physicians and staff, especially since Genesis was named as one of the nation's best health care organizations with its recognition as a Thomson Reuters 100 Top Hospital®.

"Everyone was wonderful," said Ashley. "They were so kind and always asked what they could do for me. I was worried in the beginning, but the doctors and nurses knew what they were doing. The quality of care has been excellent, and I would recommend Genesis to anyone."

Among the Best

As a winner of the Thomson Reuters 100 Top Hospitals® award, Genesis meets the highest national quality-care standards and has one of the highest patient perceptions of care. Genesis and other 100 Top Hospital award winners are recognized for providing top-notch medical care and are seen as a guide for health care leaders across the country.

"This honor was made possible by the excellence of our physicians and dedication of our employees," said Matt Perry, Genesis president and CEO. "The award demonstrates our commitment to providing compassionate, quality health care and recognizes the value Genesis provides to both patients and the community. It's a reason to be proud."

Even though fearful of having their baby a month early, Ashley Caw and husband Jeremy knew they were in good hands at Genesis. The 100 Top Hospitals award proves it.

IT PAYS TO THINK FIRST

Program Teaches Injury Prevention

Matt Amicone of Nashport was driving home one night on SR 146, traveling about 55 m.p.h. when he reached for his iPod. "I looked down and started digging around, and when I looked up there was a truck in front of me," Matt said.

To avoid hitting the truck, he veered his car off the road and struck a tree. The 17-year-old, who was not wearing a seat belt, sustained a moderate concussion.

Matt was fortunate that he avoided more serious head and spinal cord injuries. Other teens aren't so lucky. Motor vehicle crashes are the leading cause of traumatic brain injury in young people ages 15 to 24, according to the Centers for Disease Control.

"It's not worth it to jeopardize what you have planned for the rest of your life."

– Matt Amicone
standing at the spot of his accident caused by distracted driving

To lessen the numbers, Genesis recently became a chapter of the ThinkFirst National Injury Prevention program. Genesis is only one of five hospitals in Ohio designated as a chapter, and the main goal is to provide free education to schools and the community. The program was developed 25 years ago by two neurosurgeons to reduce head and spinal cord injuries. ThinkFirst urges drivers to think first before changing songs on an iPod, talking on their cell phone or sending a text.

Making a Difference

Lori Cody, B.S.N., R.N., is the Genesis ThinkFirst chapter director, a mother of teen drivers and a trauma nurse who treats victims of distracted driving. "Texting while driving is dangerous because the cognitive, visual and manual skills needed for driving are impaired. It's similar to driving after drinking," she said. "This is a great opportunity to stress the importance of safe driving for teens and adults. I see the program making a difference in people's lives."

Matt shares his story to help other teens stay safe. "Think before you do it," he said about reaching for the iPod. "It's not worth it to jeopardize what you have planned for the rest of your life."

The Tri-Valley High School senior plans to play football in college. "If I would have had a serious head injury, all my plans for kicking and college would be trashed. Now I put the iPod on shuffle and let it play."

Reading, Writing & Helmet Safety

Lori Cody demonstrated the importance of wearing a helmet to 300 Nashport Elementary students in May by dropping a fresh egg on the floor. "This is what could happen to your brain if you wreck your bike and are not wearing a helmet," Cody told the wide-eyed students. "If you break your arm or leg, we can fix that. But we can't always fix your brain."

Cody wrapped the egg in a helmet (Styrofoam cup), dropped it from the same height and held up the unscathed egg – reinforcing the importance of wearing a helmet while riding a horse, bike, four-wheeler or skateboard.

Eight-year-old Laine Welker of Nashport got the message. "If you don't wear a helmet you could get hurt, and your brothers will have to take care of you and stuff," she said wrinkling her nose.

For more information on the Genesis ThinkFirst programs and education that helps meet the state's requirements for health and science, call Genesis Trauma Services at (740) 454-5638.

Children, Moms, Dads, Grandmothers, Grandfathers – Join Us

This Spirit of Women event is focused on helping parents and children get ready to head back to school. We will have tips to help moms deal with stress, provide good nutritional snacks and keep their children safe from abductors. We are offering a program that every child and parent should attend – KidEscape. This is a nationally recognized program to teach children how to escape from a potential abductor with easy-to-use techniques. Beyond this important education, there will be numerous activities, refreshments and great door prizes – including 2 bicycles, donated by the Genesis Lifestyle & Fitness Center.
